

LIST OF SIGNATORIES TO AMICUS

Amicus Curiae Oklahoma State Medical Association (“OSMA”) is part of a national network of medical associations that cooperates to represent medical doctors on local, state, and national issues. With over 4,600 physician members, OSMA is the primary professional association for individuals licensed to practice medicine in Oklahoma. Founded in 1906, the physicians of OSMA are committed to advancing the science and art of medicine for the betterment of Oklahoma physicians and the public they serve, and to fostering the highest ethical and clinical standards for the practice of medicine in the State of Oklahoma. is part of a national network of medical associations that cooperates to represent medical doctors on local, state, and national issues. The 4,600 physician members of the association.

Amicus Curiae Oklahoma Nurses Association (“ONA”) is the professional association for all registered nurses in Oklahoma. Founded in 1908, ONA is a community of nurses across all specialties and practice settings working to promote the profession of nursing. ONA works to address the issues that face nurses on a daily basis as well other issues of importance –standards and ethics of care, scope of practice and patient safety. ONA focuses on practice, educational, political and professional issues that impact registered nurses in Oklahoma. ONA strongly supports health care for a number of vulnerable populations and believes patients must be secure in the knowledge that their treatment providers are wholly devoted to treatment. ONA believes that the breaching of patient confidentiality and the threat of criminal prosecution deters pregnant women who suffer from chemical dependence from seeking and obtaining prenatal care.

Amicus Curiae YWCA of Oklahoma City is dedicated to eliminating racism and empowering women throughout Oklahoma. YWCA of Oklahoma City provides safe places for women and girls, builds strong women leaders, and advocates for women's rights and civil rights.

Amicus Curiae Doctors of the World-USA (“DOW-USA) was founded in 1990 by a group of volunteer physicians and is an international health and human rights organization working where health is diminished or endangered by violations of human rights and civil liberties. Reaching out to the most vulnerable and marginalized populations, in concert with local partners around the globe, Doctors of the World-USA’s projects build long-term solutions addressing urgent health issues, with particular focus on women’s health and vulnerable children.

Amicus Curiae National Stillbirth Society is an organization devoted to advocating on behalf of the more than 26,000 American mothers who suffer a stillbirth each year. As a misunderstood, under-discussed and under-researched medial condition, its mission is to promote greater stillbirth awareness, research and reform. The National Stillbirth Society supports this brief because it believes that contrary to popular theories, stillbirth is a random event that strikes all categories of mothers and is generally never caused by something the mother did or did not do. Although the National Stillbirth Society does not condone illicit drug use by any person at any time, it believes that the circumstances of Ms. Hernandez's situation do not suggest a crime, but rather that her baby was one of the 15,000 stillbirths each year for which no cause can be attributed.

Amicus Curiae American Nurses Association ("ANA") is a professional organization representing this nation's over 2.2 million registered nurses. ANA is committed to ensuring the availability and accessibility of health care services. It believes that access to maternal-child health services is particularly critical to efforts to prevent disease and to provide early intervention for health care problems. Thus, it opposes laws, policies and practices that erect barriers to prenatal care.

Amicus Curiae American College of Nurse Midwives ("ACNM"), with roots dating back to 1929, is the oldest women's health care organization in the U.S. ACNM sets standards for the education, certification and practice of certified nurse-midwives and certified midwives, supports research, administers and promotes continuing education programs, creates liaisons with state and federal agencies and members of Congress and advocates for programs and policies that improve the health status of women and their families. The mission of ACNM is to promote the health and well-being of women and newborns within their families and communities through the development and support of the profession of midwifery practiced by certified nurse-midwives, and certified midwives. The philosophy inherent in the profession states that the midwives believe every individual to have the right to safe, satisfying health care with respect for human dignity and cultural variations.

ACNM acknowledges that addiction is medically recognized condition that affects more than 20 percent of all pregnant women per year. Addiction is the persistent compulsive use of a substance known to be physically, psychologically or socially harmful and includes addiction to substances such as tobacco, alcohol, prescription medications, and illicit drugs. In pregnancy, addiction to one or more of these substances constitutes a significant health problem. ACNM supports a health care system where women with addictions in pregnancy are treated with compassion, not punishment. This care should occur within a multidisciplinary environment that provides holistic care for pregnant women in the context of her social environment and where consideration of the health risks is paramount. Recognizing that substance use in pregnancy is a disease that requires a team approach to treatment, the American College of Nurse-Midwives supports legislation that: 1. Protects the rights of women with addictions to seek health care without fear of criminal retribution; 2. Encourages the development of public health programs to address innovative interventions to treat addictions in pregnancy; 3. Promotes education and research into this significant public health issue.

Amicus Curiae Global Lawyers and Physicians ("GLP") is a non-profit non-governmental organization that focuses on health issues and human rights. Founded in 1996, GLP was formed to reinvigorate the collaboration of the legal, medical and public health professions in protecting the human rights and dignity of all persons. GLP's mission is to implement the health-related provisions of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the Covenants on Civil and Political Rights and Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights, with a focus on health and human rights, patient rights, and human experimentation.

Amicus Curiae Institute for Health and Recovery (“IHR”) is a nonprofit organization dedicated to developing a comprehensive continuum of care for families affected by substance abuse, especially women and their children. IHR focuses on the development of prevention, intervention, treatment services and the integration of gender-specific services within substance abuse prevention and treatment. IHR serves individual women and men, and families, with a continuing emphasis on pregnant and parenting women and their children. IHR members know firsthand the fears pregnant substances abusing women have regarding prosecution, causing them to be reluctant to seek prenatal care and substance abuse treatment. With over 10 years of experience in working with pregnant women who use drugs, IHR rejects policies such as those under which Theresa Hernandez was prosecuted.

Amicus Curiae National Association of Nurse Practitioners in Women’s Health (“NPWH”), formerly National Association of Nurse Practitioners in Reproductive Health, is a professional organization founded in 1980 that represents nurse practitioners who provide care to women in both the primary care setting and in women’s health specialty practices. The U.S. Department of Education recognizes NPWH as the designated organization for the accreditation of women’s health nurse practitioner programs. NPWH is committed to assuring access of quality health care to women of all ages by nurse practitioners, and to protecting a woman’s right to determine the course of her own health care. NPWH programs and publications offer special expertise in reproductive health care and nurse practitioner issues.

Amicus Curiae National Association of Social Workers, Inc. (“NASW”) is the world’s largest association of professional social workers with over 155,000 members in fifty-five chapters throughout the United States and abroad. Founded in 1955, NASW is devoted to promoting the quality and effectiveness of social work practice, advancing the knowledge base of the social work profession, and improving the quality of life through utilization of social work knowledge and skills. NASW believes that criminal prosecution of women who use drugs during their pregnancy is inimical to family stability and counter to the best interests of the child. The needs of society are better served by treatment of addiction, not punishment of the addict. NASW’s policy statement, Alcohol, Tobacco, and Other Drugs, supports “an approach to ATOD [alcohol, tobacco and other drug] problems that emphasizes prevention and treatment” and efforts to “eliminate health disparities that accrue from ATOD problems and discriminatory practices from the criminal justice system.” (NASW, SOCIAL WORK SPEAKS, 7th ed., 2006).

Amicus Curiae National Association of Social Workers, Inc., Oklahoma Chapter (“NASW-OK”) works to enhance the professional growth and development of its members, to create and maintain professional standards, and to advance sound social practices. NASW-OK has over 1,100 members who participate in eight branches throughout Oklahoma and is primarily concerned with this case due to its local impact.

Amicus Curiae National Council on Alcoholism and Drug Dependence (“NCADD”), with its nationwide network of affiliates, provides education, information, and hope in the fight against the chronic diseases of alcoholism and other drug addictions. Founded in 1944 and based in New York, NCADD historically has provided confidential assessment and referral services for alcoholics and other drug addicts seeking treatment. In 1990, the NCADD Board of Directors adopted a policy statement on “Women, Alcohol, Other Drugs and Pregnancy” recommending that “[s]tates should avoid measures which would define alcohol and other drug use during pregnancy as prenatal child abuse and should avoid prosecutions, jailing or other punitive measures which would serve to discourage women from seeking health care services.”

Amicus Curiae American Academy of Addiction Psychiatry (“AAAP”) is an international professional membership organization made up of practicing psychiatrists, university faculty, medical students and other related professionals founded in 1985 with approximately 1,000 members in the United States and around the world. AAAP is devoted to promoting accessibility to the highest quality treatment for all who need it by providing continuing education for addiction professionals, disseminating new information in the field of addiction psychiatry, and encouraging research on the etiology, prevention, identification, and treatment of the addictions. AAAP opposes the prosecution of Theresa Hernandez based on the belief that instead of promoting prenatal care and treatment, the threat that women’s use of illegal substances can be disclosed to law enforcement for use in criminal prosecutions will likely discourage some pregnant women from seeking prenatal care and treatment of their substance use disorder and negatively impact the confidential psychiatrist-patient relationship.

Amicus Curiae The Association for Medical Education and Research in Substance Abuse (“AMERSA”) was founded in 1976 by members of the Career Teachers Program, a multidisciplinary health professional faculty development program supported by the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism and the National Institute on Drug Abuse. AMERSA has since grown to over 300 members representing physicians of several specialties (MD and DO), nurses, social workers, psychologists, pharmacologists, dentists, and other professionals. AMERSA prides itself on its multidisciplinary and multispecialty membership, and its members benefit from the diversity of perspectives. AMERSA members have been responsible for many important advances in substance abuse education and research. AMERSA members have developed, implemented, and evaluated state-of-the-art curricula, educational programs, and faculty development programs. Our members have developed clinical and research measures for substance abuse services and professional education. They are actively engaged in research related to substance abuse education, clinical service, and prevention.

Amicus Curiae Association of Reproductive Health Professionals (“ARHP”) is a national non-profit, interdisciplinary medical association for leaders in the field of reproductive health. Founded in 1963 and comprised of physicians, nurse practitioners, other clinicians, pharmacists, and researchers, ARHP serves as an important source of reproductive health education and information for health care professionals, patients, legislators, other professionals, and the public at large. ARHP is concerned that the prosecution of Theresa Hernandez threatens to undermine the quality of care provided by physicians, nurse practitioners, and other clinicians who treat pregnant and parenting women in Oklahoma by threatening the prosecution, conviction, and incarceration - rather than treatment for their substance use during pregnancy.

Amicus Curiae Baron Edward de Rothschild Chemical Dependency Institute ("the Institute") has over 35 years of leadership in the field of addiction treatment, first at Beth Israel Medical Center proper, then in 1988 under the name of the Chemical Dependency Institute, and now under its new name. The Institute comprises a variety of clinical programs that care for some 13,000 individuals annually; these programs are provided on an inpatient as well as ambulatory basis, and include both long-term rehabilitation as well as acute intervention. They have served as models for clinicians from around the world for over three decades.

The Institute also has an active, highly respected research staff that has published scores of seminal findings in peer-reviewed professional journals. Institute staff members are active participants in international conferences and have played a very strong advocacy role, in America and abroad, for humane policy reform and expansion as well as enhancement of treatment services. The Institute brings its expertise to this Court to explain that punitive government interventions will only deter pregnant substance abusers from obtaining prenatal care and drug treatment and undermine health outcomes for mother and child.

Amicus Curiae The Center for Children of Incarcerated Parents ("CCIP") was founded in 1989 to prevent intergenerational crime and incarceration. CCIP produces high quality documentation on, and the development of model services for, children of criminal offenders and their families. CCIP offers educational curricula that includes: parent education for prisoners; parent empowerment; parent education for substance-dependent parents in treatment; parent education for elementary school children; family life education; health education for incarcerated mothers; women's issues; the effects of trauma and violence on children; mentor training; and parent advocacy for prisoners. In addition, CCIP provides therapeutic services for children, children's caregivers, and teachers, as well as a range of family reunification services.

Amicus Curiae Center for Gender and Justice ("CGJ") seeks to develop gender-responsive policies and practices for women and girls who are under criminal justice supervision. The Center is committed to research and to the implementation of policies and programs that will encourage positive outcomes for this underserved population.

Amicus Curiae Child Welfare Organizing Project ("CWOP") is a 10-year-old organization of New York City parents and professionals who seek reform of New York City child welfare practices through increased, meaningful parent / client involvement in child welfare decision-making at all levels, from case-planning to policy, budgets and legislation. CWOP has approximately 1,500 parent members. Most of CWOP's staff, and about half of CWOP's Board of Directors, are parents who have had direct, personal involvement with the Administration for Children's Services ("ACS"). A significant percentage of CWOP members are mothers in recovery. A large part of CWOP's work involves debunking prevailing stereotypes about ACS-involved parents and families, putting a human face on parents who are often unfairly and inaccurately demonized and bringing CWOP's unique insights into policy discussions. CWOP hopes this will result in more enlightened public policy that effectively identifies and addresses real problems and challenges to successful family life in New York City, ultimately protecting children by helping and strengthening their families and communities.

Amicus Curiae Citizens for Midwifery (“CfM”) is a national, non-profit, and consumer-based group that promotes maternal and child health through advocating the Midwives Model of Care and seeks to have these practices recognized as an accepted standard of care for childbearing mothers. In focusing on the normalcy of childbirth and the uniqueness of each childbearing woman and family, this model includes monitoring the physical, psychological, and social well-being of childbearing mothers, providing pregnant women with individualized prenatal care and hands-on assistance during labor and delivery, minimizing technological interventions, and identifying women who require obstetrical attention. As an organization, CfM also provides information on midwifery and childbirth issues, encourages and provides guidance for midwifery advocacy, and represents consumer interests regarding midwifery and maternity care.

Amicus Curiae The Freeman Institute for Cognitive Therapy offers specialized training in Behavioral Health Topics, Psychology, Psychiatric Nursing, Addiction Treatment and certification Preparation in Cognitive Behavior Therapy for a variety of behavioral health disorders, including personality disorders; substance misuse disorders; OCD (obsessive compulsive disorder); PTSD (stress disorders); ADHD (attention deficit hyperactivity disorder); panic disorder (and other anxiety disorders); bipolar disorder; pain management; chronic pain; eating disorders; crisis or trauma response; depression; coping skills training; counseling skill education and training; parenting help; treatment motivation; individual and group psychotherapy; therapy for children and adolescents; and relationship, couple or marriage and family problems.

Amicus Curiae Family Justice is an organization that draws on the unique strengths of families and neighborhoods to break cycles of involvement with the criminal justice system. It works on engaging families in support of those released under community supervision and demonstrates the positive effect that families have on the reentry and rehabilitation process. In pursuing its mission, Family Justice assists government and communities by providing direct services, testing methodologies that promote change, delivering training and consulting to encourage use of its methods, and serving as a resource for both the criminal justice field and the general public.

Amicus Curiae National Coalition for Child Protection Reform (“NCCPR”) is an organization of professionals, drawn from the fields of law, academia, psychology and journalism, who are dedicated to improving child welfare systems through public education and advocacy. NCCPR, a tax-exempt non-profit organization founded at a 1991 meeting at Harvard Law School, is incorporated in Massachusetts and headquartered in Alexandria, Virginia. NCCPR devotes much of its attention to public education concerning widespread public misconceptions about the child protective system and its impact on the children it is intended to serve. Lawyer members of NCCPR also individually have litigated numerous precedential cases involving child protection policies and proceedings. NCCPR is concerned that, contrary to promoting the interests of vulnerable newborn children, a policy which calls for the arrest of those children's mothers based upon urine or blood toxicology screens, or methadone treatment causes children to suffer unnecessary psychological harm and trauma from being separated from their mothers. NCCPR is also concerned that such a separation interferes with the children's constitutionally protected liberty interest in their relationship with their mothers.

Amicus Curiae The National Institute for Reproductive Health (“the Institute”) is an innovation institute for state and local organizations working on reproductive health issues. The Institute offers strategic guidance, hands-on support and funding to help state and local leaders remove barriers to health care and change public policies and to help women in communities all across America gain access to the full range of reproductive health care options and the opportunity to have healthy pregnancies.

Amicus Curiae National Latina Institute for Reproductive Health (“NLIRH”) wants to ensure the fundamental human right to reproductive health care for Latinas, their families and their communities through education, policy advocacy, and community mobilization. Through advocacy, community mobilization, and public education, NLIRH is shaping public policy, cultivating new Latina leadership, and broadening the reproductive health and rights movement to reflect the unique needs of Latinas. NLIRH believes that coercive, discriminatory and/or punitive policies and practices (such as the criminalization of pregnant substance users) are differentially impacting Latinas and other women of color.

Amicus Curiae National Women’s Health Network (“NWHN”) improves the health of all women by developing and promoting a critical analysis of health issues in order to affect policy and support consumer decision-making. The Network aspires to a health care system that is guided by social justice and reflects the needs of diverse women. The National Women's Health Network was founded in 1975 to give women a greater voice within the healthcare system. NWHN is a membership-based organization supported by 8,000 individuals and organizations nationwide. NWHN has established core values to guide us in our work as advocates for women's health: (1) We value women's descriptions of their own experiences and believe that health policy should reflect the diversity of women's experiences, (2) we believe that evidence rather than profit should drive the services offered and information that is made available to women to inform their health decision making and practices, (3) we value analysis of science that takes into consideration systems of power and oppression, (4) we believe that the government has an obligation to safeguard the health of all people, (5) all women should have access to excellent health care and (6) women's normal physiological changes over the lifespan should not be unduly medicalized.

Amicus Curiae Native American Women’s Health Education Resource Center (“the Resource Center”) is the first resource center located on a reservation in the US. The Resource Center was formed in 1988 as a project of the Native American Community Board on the Yankton Sioux Reservation in South Dakota to address pertinent issues of health, education, and economic development of Native American people. The Resource Center has expanded to include many programs benefiting people locally, nationally, and internationally. Some examples are the Domestic Violence Program; AIDS Prevention Program; Youth Services, which include the Child Development Program and the Youth Wellness Program; Adult Learning Program; Environmental Awareness and Action Project; Cancer Prevention; Fetal Alcohol Syndrome Awareness Program; Clearinghouse of Educational Materials; Food Pantry; Wicozanni Wowapi Newsletter; Diabetic Nutrition Program; Scholarships for Native American Women; Reproductive Health and Rights; "Green Thumb" Project; and Community Health Fairs.

Amicus Curiae Oklahoma Women's Network is an online network whose purpose is to improve the status of women and girls via issue advocacy, coalition building, and information sharing; to increase the number of women in elective and appointed office in Oklahoma through recruitment, leadership training, campaign schools, and candidate recognition; to identify gender bias in Oklahoma statutes and programs through creation of a state-level women's lobby and other projects that advance the cause of women and girls; to promote collaboration and networking between women's organizations; to celebrate past Oklahoma women, recognize today's women leaders and spotlight Oklahoma's future women leaders via biographies, resumes and contact information; and to announce upcoming events of interest to Oklahoma women and recount recent events focused on the status of women in Oklahoma.

Amicus Curiae Physicians and Lawyers for National Drug Policy ("PLNDP") is a non-partisan group of the nation's leading physicians and attorneys, whose goal is to promote and support public policy and treatment options that are scientifically-based, evidence-driven, and cost-effective. The initiative, funded by the JEHT and Robert Wood Johnson, and building on the earlier work of Physician Leadership on National Drug Policy, is organized around the belief that effective policies for alcohol and other drugs must be grounded in data, not politics. PLNDP will advocate for evidence-based policy decisions and will encourage local innovation by establishing stable professional partnerships in every state and by supporting community coalitions. For the first time, physicians and lawyers, often viewed as squaring off in policy debates, have joined forces to make a concerted effort to move the national conversation beyond the often misleading and polarizing policy debates of the past.

Amicus Curiae Planned Parenthood of Central Oklahoma ("PPCO") provides women, men and families of central Oklahoma the best possible reproductive health care services. PPCO's mission is to provide comprehensive reproductive and complementary health care services in settings which preserve and protect the essential privacy and rights of each individual; to advocate for public policies which guarantee these rights and ensure access to such services; to provide educational programs which enhance understanding of individual and societal implications of human sexuality; to promote research and the advancement of technology in reproductive health care; and to encourage understanding of their inherent bioethical, behavioral, and social implications. More than 8,400 men and women depend on Planned Parenthood of Central Oklahoma annually for high-quality, low-cost reproductive health services, and an additional 8,325 men, women, and teenagers participate in 112 educational programs and professional workshops conducted by PPCO. Founded in 1937, PPCO is one of 122 affiliates nationwide of the Planned Parenthood Federation of America®, which together provide family planning, reproductive health care and other services to over 2.3 million Americans.

Boyd, PhD, is Associate Professor in the Studies in Policy and Practice Program at University of Victoria, and a Senior Research Fellow in the Centre for Addictions Research of British Columbia. Her research is on gender and maternal drug use, women in conflict with the law, drug law and policy, and research methodology. Professor Boyd is author of Mothers and Illicit Drugs: Transcending the Myths, From Witches to Crack Moms: Women, Drug Law, and Policy, and co-author of With Child, Substance Use During Pregnancy: a Woman-Centered Approach.

Amicus Curiae Deborah Coady, M.D., practices Obstetrics & Gynecology clinically at Soho Obstetrics & Gynecology PC in New York. Dr. Coady received her medical degree from the Mt Sinai School of Medicine of The City University of New York and has been in the profession for 27 years.

Amicus Curiae Nancy Day, M.P.H. is Professor of Psychiatry and Epidemiology. She has studied the effects of prenatal exposures to alcohol, marijuana, cocaine, and tobacco for over 20 years. She has published prolifically and has received grants from the NIH in support of her work. She is currently the Director of the Maternal Health Practices and Child Development Project centered on identifying long-term effects of prenatal substance abuse.

Amicus Curiae Nancy D. Campbell is the author of Using Women: Gender, Drug Policy, and Social Justice (Routledge 2000), a history of how pregnant women are used to call for drug policies that are unjustifiably harsh and ill considered in terms of their social consequences.

Amicus Curiae Katherine Irwin, PhD, is a professor at the University of Hawaii at Manoa, teaching courses in: Survey of Criminology, Introduction to Juvenile Delinquency, Survey of Drugs and Society, Analysis in Field Research Methods, Analysis in Criminology/Juvenile Delinquency, Methods of Research in Criminal Justice, Seminar in Criminology. Dr. Irwin's research areas include juvenile delinquency, deviance, drug use, violence, youth culture, adolescent development, gender and crime, research methods, and delinquency prevention.

Amicus Curiae Stephen Kandall, M.D. is a pediatrician who has cared for over a thousand babies exposed to drugs. He is also chief of neonatology at Beth Israel Medical Center in New York and has written a book (Substance and Shadow: Women and Addiction in the United States Cambridge: Harvard University Press, 1996.) outlining the horrors of prosecuting women who need drug treatment.

Amicus Curiae F. David Schneider, M.D., M.S.P.H. is a family physician and an Associate Professor of Family and Community Medicine at the University of Texas Health Science Center and is a recognized expert on issues of health care and domestic violence. Dr. Schneider is the president of the newly established Academy on Violence and Abuse, a member of the AMA Advisory Council on Violence and Abuse, and the Chair of the American Academy of Family Physicians Commission on Public Health.

Amicus Curiae Linda Worley, M.D. is an Associate Professor in the College of Medicine at the University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences (UAMS) and directs the campus wide Student Mental Health Service. Dr. Worley is a board certified Psychiatrist with sub-specialization in Addiction Psychiatry. Dr. Worley was recruited to join the UAMS, Department of Psychiatry Faculty in 1992 and was promoted with tenure in 1998 in the clinician educator track. Dr. Drucker was founding Director of a 1000 patient drug treatment program in the Bronx, and has been an NIH funded researcher of AIDS and drug addiction for 15 years. He is author of over 100 scientific articles and book chapters and is Editor in Chief of the international journals Addiction Research and Theory and the new on-line Harm Reduction Journal.com. Dr. Drucker was a founder of the International Harm Reduction Association and Chairman of Doctors of the World / USA (1993- 1997). Dr. Drucker currently serves as a senior Soros Justice Fellow.

Amicus Curiae Fonda Davis Eycler, Ph.D. is a Professor in the Department of Pediatrics of the University of Florida College of Medicine and is also a licensed Developmental Psychologist. Dr. Eycler is Developmental Director of Early Steps, an early intervention program for children from birth to three years of age, who live in the surrounding sixteen counties and have developmental delays and disabilities. She is a Principle Investigator on a prospective, longitudinal research study that has been following a cohort of the children born to women who used cocaine during their pregnancy and a matched comparison group of pregnant women who were not addicted to cocaine and their children. Dr. Eyler brings a wealth of knowledge concerning the impact on children of drug abuse during pregnancy.

Amicus Curiae Dr. Sharon Morgillo Freeman, PhD, MSN, APRN-CS, ACT, is the Director of The Center for Brief Therapy in Fort Wayne, Indiana and Vice-President of the Freeman Institute for Cognitive Therapy. She is Past-President of the National Association of Addiction Professionals (NAADAC), Member of the Board of Directors of The International Association of Cognitive Psychotherapy, Member of the Board of Directors of The Alcohol Abuse Deterrent Programs and Past-President of the Pennsylvania Association for Addiction Professionals (PAADAC). Dr. Sharon Freeman is board certified by the Academy of Cognitive Therapy in addition to certification as an Advanced Practice Psychiatric Clinical Nurse Specialist, and senior level certification as an addiction professional (MAC) through NAADAC. She has a Ph.D in Sociology and her two master's degrees were awarded in Psychology through the Adler School of Professional Psychology and Advanced Practice Psychiatric nursing at the University of Pennsylvania.

Amicus Curiae Howard Minkoff, M.D., is the Chair of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology at Maimonides Medical Center, and a distinguished Professor of Obstetrics and Gynecology at the State University of New York Health Science Center at Brooklyn. He is a member of the Ethics Committee of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists and he sits on the editorial board or is an editorial consultant to almost all of the most prominent medical journal, including JAMA, New England Journal of Medicine, Lancet, and hundreds of articles, and is internationally recognized expert on HIV disease and high risk pregnancy. Professor Minkoff has conducted years of grand scale research, supported by millions of dollars of grants, concerning the reproductive behaviors of low-income women, many with drug abuse problems. Through his work with these women, he has developed widely adopted treatment protocols and ethical guidelines. Professor Minkoff brings his wealth of knowledge to this Court to ensure that it understands that punitive measures, including criminal prosecutions, of pregnant women with drug abuse problems will harm both maternal and child health.

Amicus Curiae Barbara T. O'Brien, RN, BSN, is Senior Coordinator of the Office of Continuing Perinatal Education at the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center, where she coordinates and instructs extended coursework for registered nurses around fetal and perinatal health, including fetal monitoring regarding alcohol and other drug use.
